

Stimson Lumber Company

Inland Region Public Access Guidelines

Revised 08/04/2017

(Subject to Modification without notice)

It is Stimson's intent to open its lands to those forms of public recreation that are compatible with the management goals and activities on the forests. Excluded are camping, firewood cutting and operating motorized vehicles off roads or on closed roads. These guidelines will be amended over time to adjust for changing conditions and experiences.

Use of Stimson land does not convey any right or permission to enter or cross neighboring private lands. Users do not have permission to access Stimson lands through private landowners. It is the responsibility of the user to obtain permission to cross or access adjacent landowners.

The employees and associates of Stimson that manage these lands work continually to maintain and improve their productivity and appearance and take great satisfaction in their accomplishments. These public access guidelines can only be maintained if the guests using these lands share this attitude and commitment. Littering, vandalism, negligence or malicious treatment of these properties by the public may result in the closure of Stimson property to public access. Consider how your actions reflect on yourself and the outdoor recreation community in general.

These guidelines are intended for individual/family recreation. Large groups, clubs, organized or sanctioned events, and commercial enterprises including commercial guides are not permitted.

All of these properties are Industrial Forestland and are managed as such. Roads and trails are not built nor maintained to public transportation standards. No provisions have been made for food, water, sanitation, communication or emergency services on any Stimson ownership. There is NO GUARANTEE, warranty & representation that these lands are safe for any purpose.

Stimson's employees, associates and contractors may be in the woods at any time of day or night, as well as any day of the week. The movement and maintenance of machinery and facilities, the application of herbicide and fertilizer and other management activities may start without notice and are frequently mobile in nature. These activities often include the use of power equipment and motor vehicles on roads and lands that may be closed to public use. Restrictions on the timing and nature of public access are intended to reduce, but cannot eliminate public exposure to the risks and hazards associated with timber and land management activities.

The following stipulations and limitations apply to any and all public use of all Stimson lands and users agree to the following:

Access

- Some Stimson lands are closed year round. See Appendix A for special sites with specific rules. Others areas may be restricted or closed at various times and places which may not be in the Appendix.
- Non-motorized access is allowed year round on most Stimson lands. This includes walk-in and bicycles. Winter access is limited to non-motorized access such as snowshoeing and cross country skiing.
- There is no exclusive use for the public. Other members of the public may be using the same property at the same time.
- All roads must remain passable for administrative traffic. Never block or park directly in front of any gate.
- Use of Stimson lands by any member of the public may be revoked by Stimson immediately for violation of Stimson's access guidelines or violation of local, state or federal law.
- No public entry is permitted into active industrial areas, logging sites, road construction areas, herbicide and fertilizer application areas or other similar uses. Users must avoid conflict or interference with any and all forest management activities.
- Users will not modify Stimson lands in any way. Users are not allowed to erect permanent structures under any circumstances (e.g., roads, ATV trails, wells, diversions, sheds, shacks, outhouses, etc.)
- Horse pasturing or cattle grazing is prohibited.
- No commercial activities of any kind are allowed.

Firewood

- Firewood cutting is not allowed on Stimson lands.
